

Sinclair's broadcasting decision to abuse the public trust in broadcasting clearly partisan and of questionable veracity an anti-Kerry documentary just before the election puts in question their fitness to use the public airwaves free of charge.

This is not about your political leanings, it is about whether Sinclair is serving the public interest or is engaging in forwarding its political agenda. The public airwaves are just that prt of the public trust, not to be abused by private interests to forward their agenda.

This is not to say that stations are not allow to have editorial policies, as long as they are stated as such and not passed off as unbiased news.

Imposing a fine on Sinclair stations that show this documentary is not enough. Licenses of the stations that air this program should not have their licenses renewed.
